Safety as an Individual Responsibility

It is important for workers to know and understand that they have as much responsibility, if not more, for their own safety at work! Employers have duties and responsibilities placed on them by the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (Act)...It is important for you, the worker, to value yourself enough to work safely, to strive not to get injured in the most minor of ways...It is important for you to be able to understand how a fatality or a serious injury could affect you and/or your family.
